

The Black Book of Limerick, Placename Index.

Compiled by Brian Hodkinson, Asst. Curator, Limerick Museum©.

“The Black Book of Limerick”, by James McCaffrey, Dublin 1907, has a very poor index. The following is a comprehensive and annotated index to all the place names it contains. There is an index of people on the same website.

If you spot errors or omissions please let me know.

Indexed by page reference. Placenames used as personal names e.g. Robert de Dundonald, not included. Names in bold are positively identified. Alternate spellings are given in brackets. Where there are more than two places in the county with the same name, the Ordnance Survey sheet number is given to identify the correct place e.g. OS13.

In the notes O’M refers to Art Ó Maolfabhail, Logaimneacha na hÉireann Imleabhar I, Contae Luimnigh, 1990, Dublin. Westropp to T.J. Westropp, “A Survey of the Ancient Churches in the County of Limerick”, Proc. Royal Irish Acad. Vol 25, 1905. RMP= Recorded Monuments and Places number. MacC refers to the editor of the Black Book. All parishes are the old civil parishes.

⁹ Westropp states that the new C of I church was built on the old site in 1813. There is however a ruin in Athlacca North, marked as Kilbroney, which he states is in the neighbouring townland of Tullerboy. This may be the original church RMP LI 39-012

¹⁰ A parish name, with no corresponding townland. Athneasy church is marked as such on the OS in Ballinvana townland, RMP LI 40-104. There is a second church nearby in Adamstown RMP LI 40-073

¹¹ MacC. Gives it as Kilpeacon, but is not followed by O'M

¹² MacC gives Ballycahane but is not followed by O'M

¹³ According to O'M the p. 149 ref. is to the B. on OS 49; this cannot be correct. The B. of OS 49 is in Emly diocese, Aherlow deanery, according to Westropp. The B. on p. 149 is listed under the deanery of Garth in L. diocese.

¹⁵ See Westropp castles for 1336 Crewymailly and 1615 Balliniclogh alias Crewe Iwally. See Omayl note

¹⁷ Possible ID. O'M gives Baile Murchada as first ref. c. 1550, but it seems reasonable to suggest the BBL refs are earlier. Furthermore it is possible to suggest that this is Crecora church. Crecora is a parish, not a townland and its name is first given in the BBL for 1278. The early refs for Ballymurphy are c1200. The present day Ballymurphy is literally over the road from Crecora church, but because the west boundary of the present townland follows the centre line of the road, it would appear to have been tidied up by the OS surveyors. ⁴⁶ O'M gives this identification. The church of Dolyth of the BBL is listed in Adare deanery. Dollas townland is a detached portion of Ballingarry parish in Ballingarry deanery with no church marked on OS 30. There are two adjacent townlands of D. Upper and Lower, both in Croom parish, Adare deanery, one of which contains a disused graveyard RMP 30-062. This is the most likely site. The adjacent townland of Morenane contains a church ruin but is in Ballingarry deanery.

⁴⁸ This pair occurs together in the Calendars of Papal Registers, e.g. Dowyn Yris et Dowyn Gadymon, assigned to secular clerks, 1454, CPR 10, p. 695. The index of Vol. 11, identifies these as now forming part of the parish of Particles; rural portions within the parish of Ballingaddy. See also Westropp entry for Dungadamus.

⁹⁰ ID by BJH. The chapel of Kylmocho is in Ballingarry deanery according to the BBL, Kilmacow is in the parish of that name; RMP LI 30-084

⁹⁶ A parish. The Cistercian abbey of the same name lies in the parish. Presumably the parish church is the ruin marked next to the abbey RMP LI 31-010 & 050

⁹⁷ MacC. gives Ardevolan, which is the alternative name, see O’M

⁹⁸ MacC, p. 177, gives this as Croagh, but O’M does not follow. An indication that MacC may be right is the ID of Lisnamuck which, if correctly identified by O’M, is in Croagh parish. It would then appear to be the chapel for the detached portion of the parish.

⁹⁹ A parish centered on the village of the same name RMP LI 13-009

¹⁰⁰ MacC gives Morgans, but O’M does not follow.

¹⁰¹ A parish with church in the townland of the same name RMP LI 20-056

¹⁰² A parish with church in town of same; there is another church just outside in Churchtown RMP LI 36-024.

¹²¹ A parish with church in the townland of the same name RMP LI 31-077

¹²² A parish. The OS marks two churches as site of Uregare church, which probably correspond to the church and chapel in the BBL. The western one lies in Knockuregare townland, RMP LI 39-046, the eastern in Uregare townland, RMP LI 40-043. Westropp incorrectly states that the cantred of Ioleger was centred on Uregare, see Ioleger above.
